Handcrafted by neighbor Anthony Borero, this sign sits at the entrance to Aloha Estates and serves as a landmark to our community.

Aloha Kākou,

Hawai'i Island is one of the most beautiful, cultural, and ecologically diverse places in the world. The Mana and spiritual connection that deeply resonates in the na'au of the indigenous people is what has attracted others to make this gorgeous island their home. However, living on the Big Island definitely comes with its' unique challenges. Last year, Pahoa residents were on high alert when Pele made her presence known. Her unpredictable fierceness leaves many uncertain of their future in Hawai'i. A few months later, the Big Island felt the wrath of Mother Nature. Strong winds left a path of devastation throughout the Hawaiian Islands. The Aloha Estates community awoke to fallen tree branches blocking the entrance of Mauna Kea Drive and the mass destruction on Mauna Loa Drive, making it impassable. The outpouring of help from neighbors, relatives, and strangers was a welcome relief for many, especially those in Pahoa. People from Kaua'i, O'ahu, and Maui, came to kokua. Families that felt despair, now had hope.

This is what makes Hawai'i a great place to live...it is my home! MalamaPono.

Māhealani Kāne,

Aloha Estates Association President
